It will be the duty of the houses of parliament to say We will not bind on our necks, and on those of our posterity, a yoke from which the country has worked itself free. We will not abandon the trust which the practice of the constitution has reposed in us of deciding by what party the government shall be carried on. It is now the duty of the electors, since Sir Robert Peel is blind enough to appeal to them, to proclaim, We will return those men, and those men only, who will maintain their station as representatives of the people. We have not broken the chains of an oligarchy to put on those of a court. We will not sanction a single step towards a return to those unhappy times, when the sovereign was the real minister, and placed and displaced at pleasure, the puppets who bore the name. It appears, therefore, that, under any combination of circumstances, the present administration cannot stand. And the arduous question is forced upon us, On what terms are their successors to take office It is obvious that they cannot accept it simpliciter, without pledge or condition, subject to be summarily ejected, while apparently possessing the full confidence of the crown, and of the people, without even a pretext that will bear a moments discussion. Some pledge must be given, and it must be more than a mere nominal pledge: it must consist of something more than...
