Not illustrated. 1895 Excerpt: . . . in 1840, so great had been the progress of the State, it produced a larger quantity of corn than any other in the Union. Nor was it lacking in those industrial enterprises that establish the character of a progressive and prosperous people. As early as 1810 it was known as an iron-producing State, second only to Pennsylvania. The cannon balls that were sent hurtling through the British ranks at New Orleans were molded in Dickson County, of Tennessee iron. The most active commerce of the Mississippi Valley found its center at Nashville. Politically the State was regarded as the most influential in the South, under the leadership of such men as Jackson, Hugh L. White, Emerson, Houston, Bell, Polk, Johnson, Jones, Zollicoffer, Cave Johnson, Henry, Haynes, Gentry, Aaron V. Brown, Haskell, Neil S. Brown, and others its reputation for statesmanship and oratory reached the furthest couuries of civilization. To celebrate the virtues of our great men; to honor those who hewed out homes from the wilderness and drove back the savages; to keep in remembrance those who built up our manufactories, is surely a high duty devolving upon the present generation, and all good men, proud of the history of Tennessee, are lending their best influences to the undertaking. It is proposed, first of all, to collect the scattered facts and traditions that go to illustrate our past history; to bring to the knowledge of the present generation the hardships and the spirit of endurance that characterized...
